Salvation Army
In Need of More
Week Campships

Applications for campships to the Salvation Army's Camp Mt. Crags are overbalancing available funds for that purpose according to Lt. Col. Russell E. Clarke, local Salvationist leader. The Salvation Army camp, located in the Malibu mountains near Calabasas opens its doors to public campers August 2 for five weeks during which time approximately 1000 youngsters will spend a week in the Army's improved mountain retreat. "This year the Salvation Army encounters considerably more needy youngsters to whom a week at camp will mean better health and improved morale," Clarke explained. "It is not good for children to live week in and week out in improper or crowded conditions. We have found that a period away from the home environment not only adds to the character of the child, but usually results in an improvement of his school work as well."

Scouting . . .
Around
by Bob Maxfield
The Torrance Boy Scouts have offered their services to the Torrance Fly Abatement Committee in their effort to wipe out this community's fly menace. According to Jack O. Baldwin, chairman of the committee and managing editor of the Torrance Herald, the Scouts will be called upon to conduct surveys, distribute handbills, post signs, and aid the campaign by investigation of their own homes and neighborhoods. "The scouts are doubly anxious to aid in this all-out effort.

In addition to performing a valuable civic service project, the scouts will receive credit toward the earning of the Public Health Merit Badge. This badge awarded to scouts who have passed certain requirements in the public health field, one of which is the rendering of "service in some effort recommended by the public health authorities in the interests of public health." This city-wide fly abatement program offers an excellent opportunity for the meeting of this requirement. The local scout leaders also are urged to include in their Troop program some demonstrations on the disease-carrying habits of the fly. The former Public Health Merit Badge requirement also included the drawing of a diagram showing how the housefly carries disease. When it is shown how the fly carries disease and the many diseases transmitted in this manner, the citizen will readily see the need for the control of this dangerous pest.
